A wet winter allowed the vines to accumulate sufficient water reserves for a warm and slightly dry spring. July and August were fresh with low minimum-temperatures. The heat returned in September, with early autumn sun and sporadic storms shaped the profile of a vintage in which alcoholic and phenolic ripeness coincided.

Excellent harmony and even lower yields in a great year of ripe and fresh tannins. The limestone veins in the soils of La Senda, one of our vineyards at a higher altitude in Cueva Baja, contributed depth and dynamism to this vintage.
